A Public Perspective & Community Impacts from Energy Development

Natural Resources in the West seminar
Monday, Sept. 22, 4-5:30pm,
Sacomanno Lecture Hall
Mesa State College, Science Building
Free and open to the public

Tim Sarmo, Palisade Town Administrator and longtime resident of the Western Slope, will discuss the impacts of gas development activities on municipalities with a special emphasis on protecting watersheds including the nature of municipal water provision; state and federal expectations for water quality; federal gas leasing process; federal, state, and local regulation of the natural gas industry; and municipal/industry relations.

He will focus on the Palisade story including the collaborative watershed community-based plan, problems with the planning model, and suggestions for another approach.

Seminars are FREE and open to the public and are sponsored by the MSC Lectures and Forums Committee. No registration necessary.
