Impacts of energy development

Natural Resources in the West seminar
Monday, Nov. 24, 4-5:30pm,
Saccomanno Lecture Hall
Mesa State College, Science Building
Free and open to the public

Grand Junction – The Environmental, Social and Health Impact Assessments (ESHIA) of Energy Development will be the topic of a presentation by Sean T. Norris, the ESHIA coordinator in the Piceance Basin for Chevron North America.

Norris will discuss how understanding impacts before energy development begins allows an energy development company to avoid, mitigate and improve conditions as they relate to a new program before they occur.

Seminars are FREE and open to the public and are sponsored by the MSC Lectures and Forums Committee. No registration necessary.

A schedule of all of the seminars in the series can be found at:
