New Vice President for Student Services named at MSC

Grand Junction — Mesa State College today announced that it has wrapped up a two and half month-long national search for the next Vice President for Student Services in which John Marshall of Grand Junction was selected.

“John is an energetic and talented professional with a deep knowledge of and passion for this institution,” said Mesa State President Tim Foster. “His ability to achieve results and lead diverse teams of people will make him a great asset in this important leadership role. John is a great fit for this job right now as we continue to manage a lot of campus growth and plan for the future.”

Marshall is currently the Director of Development for Mesa State, where he has successfully led the effort to raise $6 million for the Saunders capital campaign and has managed the dynamic “The New Mesa State” advertising and student recruitment effort.

The current Vice President for Student Services, Andrew Breckel, announced his retirement several months ago, which triggered the national search.

“I’m confident that John’s fresh perspective and leadership will help to carry on the great momentum we’ve been able to achieve in student services over the past several years here at Mesa State,” said Breckel.

The Vice President for Student Services oversees the offices of admissions, financial aid, student housing, the registrar, diversity and student life. Marshall is expected to assume the new role on Dec. 18.
