Grand Junction – Going to college can open up a new world of possibilities. But for many, going to college is easier said than done. That’s why Mesa State College continues to have one of the lowest tuition and fees of any college in the state. It’s why Mesa State offers a wide variety of financial aid packages. And that is why the college is creating ways for adults to complete their college degrees.

Many people have started college at some point in their lives only to find they must postpone or stop attending when other things – jobs, family, relocation, finances – interfere. Getting back to college is possible with many new course options. Learn about transfer credits, testing out of classes, online course offerings, and credit for prior learning.

Mesa State will host special information and advising sessions about completing your degree on Thursday, March 5th 5:30 to 6:30 PM in the Mesa State College Admission Office (12th Street and Texas Avenue). This is a new location for the Admission Office; come by and see the renovation. Free parking is available in front of the office or across Texas Avenue.

Come by and talk with an academic advisor to learn more about your options and begin mapping a path toward an Associate or Bachelor degree. Financial aid is available for those who qualify to help you reach your college degree goals.
